ASK YOUR SERVER ABOUT OIP SHIRTS, HATS, AND KOOZIES

Opened since 2015, OIP is located on the square of downtown Sherman. This historic building completed in 1876 by M. Snider & Bros. as a dry goods store, spent 140 years housing the retail business. (Note the S & B on the cast iron columns out front that date from 1876) When completed, the local newspaper said that this building was "the most pretentious of the structures erected after the fire." (A fire burned most of the buildings around Sherman's square in 1875.) On the wall of OIP near the moose there's a photo of this building taken upon completion of construction. Note you can see the iron columns across the front that still stand today. The photo shows that this building was three stories tall - the top two floors were removed in the 1960's due to structural concerns. During the 2015 renovation and restoration project, many of the original architectural features were uncovered and restored to create a good place to eat, drink and visit friends. There is a wealth of history in the building and on the walls.

It is understandable that many people think the name Old Iron Post derives from the metal columns out front. In fact, it refers to a part of Sherman's history. In the 1850's and 60's Sherman was a colorful place with many saloons scattered throughout downtown. One such establishment was the Iron Post Grocery which the newspaper of the time referred to as "the vilest hole in town." OIP doesn't aspire to live down to that description, however, we did like the name and wanted to honor Sherman's history and colorful characters with it.

The Old Iron Post was created by a group of friends with strong Sherman ties and a great desire to open an establishment where locals would feel at home and visitors would always be welcome.

And, as you will see, any discussion of the "longest bars in Texas" should include OIP.
